About the World Children's Festival

Held every four years since 1999 as the "Olympics" of children's creativity and co-creation, the World Children's Festival (WCF) has evolved into the largest international children's celebration of children's creativity and imagination, and a permanent quadrennial event in our Nation's Capital. The core WCF delegates are 8- to 12-year-old U.S. and international winners of the 4th Arts Olympiad, an art and sport program endorsed by the U.S. Olympic Committee; the "DC Ambassadors" selected through the Arts Olympiad in DC public schools; and 6- to 16-year-old musicians and performers selected by online voting or distinguished juries. Eminent educators and field experts ranging from Olympians and professional artists to scientists and technologists host workshops and activities to nurture children's creativity and develop their empathy in a global community setting. Free and open to the public, the WCF attracts more than 15,000 attendees with workshops and activities suitable for children ages 4 to 84.
